If a person is an employee of an unknown company (for example, clicks through from the generic turntable link or they click the Not An Employee At This Company link on the other screen, they will see this screen.

When typing in the employer name, they should get an autocomplete.

We should try to match the last name/ birth date to the eligibility list of the company. If there is a match, we can go ahead and enroll the person immediately. If there is no match or if they are not yet eligible to sign up, they should be given a message saying that their sign up is pending. It should also send an email to the provider letting them know that somebody is trying to sign up for an employer and can't be confirmed. The email should include a link to the employee's record and the provider should be told that they need to confirm with the employer whether that person really works there or not. For now, it'll be up to the provider to work this out.

Employee Signup

Employee will get an email with a link to this special screen.

The screen will only be available via the link.

Should show terms and conditions checkboxes at the bottom, but no payment info yet, if we're not doing split payments.

See the other screen for notes about confirming eligibility. They apply here as well, although they are less likely to apply.
